AFFECTING STORY. Romance in Real Life-Interesting Divorce Case at New Orleans. From the New Orleans Times Dec. 13. On the 29th of August, 1865, plaintiff, Clara H. Sprigg, widow of Charles H. Flower, of the parish of Rapides, and wife of Eastace Surget, prayed the Sixth District Court to grant a decree of divorce sundering the tie between herself and husband. The reasons of this prayer are stated almost in the very words of the plaintiff. At the time of her marriage with Eustace Surget he held the position of Lieutenant Colonel in the Confederate army, being chief of staff to Lieut. Gen. Richard Taylor. The headquarters of the Consequence of the and devetion exhibited by Colonel Surget toward her during all that time, she became so satisfied both of the sinecrity and permanency of his affection, that she returned his being under orders to join his command at Meridian, left his newly married wife on them with great pleasure and gratification

General were, during a great portion of the the Mississippi river. The acquaintance of the plaintiff with her husband began in two years before their marriage. He with other officers of the Confederate army, frelove, and consented to the marriage. They were married. Col. Surget, now her husband, the second day after their marriage, and proceeded to his destination. Some months after he left he continued to write to her letters of devoted tenderness and affection. his relatives, and his young wife received addenly the wife ceased to receive letters Rumors, vague and dank, reached her car of a change in his affections. Unable to account for this prinful silence, the young wife refused to believe the injurious, and, to ber, painful rumors. But at length a letter was received from her absent husband that to her was a cruel confirmation of these tidings. The letter contained the cruel confession of the loss of his affection for her. It stated that he had long loved a ently that his marriage with his wife was tringing this lady to the grave. Notwith-standing her agenized and outraged feel-ings at this insult upon her affections, her attachment to him was such that she fondly hoped he might be under some temporary hallucination. Suppressing her humiliation at his conduct, so unfeeling and cruel, she im-placed him by letter not to abandon her whom he had promised and aworn at the altar to love, cherish and protect, and with her to abandon his anborn child. She portraved her loneliness and misery should be persist in his abandonment. She pictured the disgrace which, without the alightes fault on her part, would attach to her proud name, the name of her children the honored name of her family. To this earnest and affectionate appeal, success of which hung the last hope of her crushed heart, Col. Surget responded: He acknowledged the deep guilt of his conduct to her, the depth of misery to which it reduced her, (without any fault of her own,) but said that fate had fixed his wee so unalterably elsewhere that, come what would, at this last ernel treatment was so wound ing to her feelings as a woman, so huriful to her affection as a wife and ho mother, that she pined under the blow corrowed and siekeness for months. ength the death of her stillborn child, severed the last tie which bound her to This was the story, plaintive, heard wringing, that the wife told to the Justice She supplicated for the laws of her coun try to come to her relief, and prayed tha the bonds of matrimony between bursel duced by her mental and bodily anguis her faithless husband. and Eustace Surget might be forever sun-dered. On the 22d of November, 1865 the flat of the court was pronounced; let a separation from bed and board, between Clara H. Sprigg, widow of Charles A. Flower, and Ensiage Surget take place. The judgment was issued and promulgated on the 28th of November, 1865. Abun dant evidence corroborates the simple story of the plaintiff, and from it certain portion The whole story of the case is told in the above lines. The facts are youched for in near thirty letters that passed from Surget to his wife. These letters, previous to the time specified, breathed the most ardent affection for his spouse, but tell no more facts than what has been represented. Col. Surget renounced in the presence of wit nesses all right and all title to the estate of s spouse. The marriage certificate showed that the two were made one on the 9th of August, 1864. The statute amending the code provides that one year after the decree of separation is pronounced, and on proof that no reconciliation has taken place be tween the parties, a decree of divorce may be granted. Hyams and Jones, attorneys for plaintiff, appeared in the Sixth District Court on the 19th of November, 1866, on one year after the prayer for separation and prayed for judgment of divorce. Evi nce showed that no reconciliation had taken place. Now, on the 7th of December, 1866, Judge Duplantier decreed a di vorce between the parties.

The marriage tie between Clara H.
Flower, nes Sprigg, and Eastace Surget is forever sundered by the laws.

AN INCIDENT-THE RELEASE OF THE HON, L. P. MILLIGAN. From the Cincinnati Enquirer. The late decision by the Supreme Cour of the United States in the case of the Hon. . P. Milligan, of Indiana, the victim of an illegal and arbitrary military commission, revives in our memory an incident connected with his imprisonment in the Ohio penifentiary, which has not been published therto. The partisan officers in the care of the Columbus penitentiary at first treated Mr. Milligun—who was as innocent of any offense as they were with great bruality. Among other things they compelled him, although he was a lawyer by profession and knew nothing about dentis-try, to draw the teeth of such of the prisoners as had the toothache. Upon one occaof the art of tooth-extraction, he was compelled, under threat of punishment, to put the forceps upon a tooth of one of the convicts. In his inexperience he put with two teeth, and drew them both at once, frightfully lacerating the poor prisoner's jaw and inflicting a terrible amount of pain upon him. Mr. Million. a mental anguish only inferior to that of the prisoner, and all was owing to the refined craelty of the keeper in putting such Mr. Milligan was first taken to the fileshop, one of the unhealthiest places in the rison, and given a kind of work that soon entirely prestrated him and sent him to the hospital. All sorts of such indignities and outrages were inflicted upon this gentleman, who is a prominent citizen of Indiana, simply because he was a Democrat and had
